NETHERWOOD YESTERDAYS

Ada and Edwin Netherwood moved to Albuquerque from Denver in 1907 or perhaps 1908. The 1910 Census showed that they lived in the Los Duranes neighborhood north of Old Town and that Mr. Netherwood listed his occupation as carpenter. Joseph Imhof was a young artist and a neighbor of the Netherwoods who was looking for some land to build a studio. The Netherwoods put Mr. Imhof in touch with Martha Taylor Theilmann who was now living in Arizona. Mr. Imhof bought an interest in about eighteen acres from Mrs. Theilmann on May 4, 1910. Mr. Imhof has a classic case of buyer's remorse and sold the land to Ada Netherwood two weeks later. After that the Netherwoods owned all of the land formerly owned by both Alcinda Morrow and Martha Taylor Theilmann and looked for an opportunity to develop their land. Mr. Imhof eventually moved to Taos years later where he became famous for his paintings of Native Americans that now hang in art museums throughout the Southwest.
